TESTING THE PUBLIC.

It is difficult to explain the contradictory reports that are sent from apparently trustworthy sources in Washington regarding the policy of the new administration upon any other theory than that Mr. Cleveland and his Cabinet are anxious to get the opinion of the public in regard to certain public measures. When the variance of opinion in the Democratic camp is considered, it is not at all surprising that Mr. Cleveland himself should be unable to determine exactly what the members of his party wish, or what they will support him in endeavoring to obtain. A little while ago it was announced that Mr. Cleveland favored an income tax; now it is said that he does not. Last week it was announced that Civil Service Reform was to be extended to all possible branches of the public service, and it is announced with equal positiveness that there is still hope for the hungry and faithful ones. In fact it seems to be a general rule that the more positively a statement of government policy is made, the more certain it is to be contradicted within a few days. All these things go to show that the great Democracy has no definite notion of what it wants or of what is expected of it. And the hope of the country lies in the chance of its not agreeing sufficiently to accomplish anything.

PROFESSOR RAY'S REMOVAL.

That any trouble should have arisen in the management of the State Institute for the Deaf and Blind, located in this city, is a matter for general regret. For many years the management, both as regards the Board of Trustees and the part entrusted to the Superintendent, has met with public approval, and the institution has come to be regarded as one of the best managed and most successful in the State. That a large part of the successful building up of the Institute was due to Superintendent Ray is a simple matter of historical record, and there is no room to doubt his ability and competence for the position. The news of his removal caused a general surprise, which in some instances amounted to indignation. It was, however, felt that the Board were only exercising the right of supreme control which had been delegated to them by law, and such was the confidence felt in the well known gentlemen who comprise the Board, that their actions were not publicly questioned.

Since that time there have been in circulation many rumors in regard to the matter, of a character for the most part without responsible backing, and of a nature which rendered the determination of their truth a most difficult matter. These have now culminated in definite charges preferred before the Governor of the State, and while these refer to other matters than Mr. Ray's removal, and while some of them are said to be very trivial, yet the establishment of the charges as made would afford sufficient reason for a change in the membership of the Board.

As the matter now stands, no charges have been preferred against Mr. Ray nor has any reason been assigned for his removal other than that it was desired to make a trial of a "more competent" man. Such a reason, while sufficient in many cases, we do not believe to be so in the present one under present circumstances. No man ever more fully realized the responsibility of his position or the importance of his work than Professor Ray, or strove more earnestly and faithfully to serve the interest of the institution with which he was connected. The rapid growth and development of the Institute from the time he entered into its management is manifest evidence of the value of his work. He was loved by the scholars under his care, he had the confidence and esteem of public men throughout the State, and is most highly respected in this community, where his reputation and standing are of the very best. The removal of such a man in favor of a stranger, however well qualified the latter may be, would suggest under ordinary circumstances injustice to the State as well as to the individual primarily affected. A word of explanation. In the present case this duty of explanation is rendered all the more affectable by the charges which have been formally preferred to the Governor and by reports widely circulated and by many believed, that the removal was due a desire for political revenge or improper personal motives.

The character, integrity and intelligence of the members of the Board would ordinarily preclude any credence of such statements, but charges have been so persistently circulated that in the absence of any statement from the Board, they have been accepted as the only explanation. There is a public demand for the true facts, and interests of the Institute as well as of the members of the Board seem to require that an explanation should be given.

As for the charges which have been made to the Governor, we trust that his action in the matter will not be hasty or partisan.

It is absolutely unfair to hold a single member responsible for the actions of the whole Board. Mr. Humphrey's public services have been long and extensive enough to entitle him to some consideration in this matter, and action should be taken only after such investigation as will secure justice to all concerned.

The opening of the Ludolome new hotel at Glenwood Springs will take place on June 1. With the opening of that hotel the western resort starts on a career of prosperity which will give it a front rank among western resorts of this class. There is no reason why Colorado Springs should not receive from the good results of its neighbor across the range. The more accommodations there are for tourists the more will come. They will not go to Glenwood if pleasanter Manitou or Colorado Springs, but will, as they visit both places instead of wasting time in distant or foreign resorts. Colorado's supply for the summer tourist is unequaled in the world and to make it of no locality must fancy that it has an exhaustible one. All the hotels that can be built across the range will not diminish the height of Pike's Peak by one hair or change one of the constituents of Manitou mineral water. So long as people come to Colorado they will come to Colorado Springs, Manitou and the other resorts of El Paso county, and can feel jealousy of Florida or Arizona which suffers to the new Hotel Colorado and the beautiful mountain city in which it is located.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, now in session at Washington, is in itself of sufficient importance to justify all the attention that is being given, both as a matter of news. The denomination represented is one of the most numerous and influential in the country, and its movements are an important part of current religious history. A more sensational interest is afforded to the gathering by the famous Briggs case, which it is expected will be called to take consideration. The appeal from the decision of the New York presbytery has been referred to the Judiciary committee, of which Rev. Geo. D. Baker is chairman. There is a question as to the regularity of the appeal, in that it has come directly to the assembly from the presbytery, without having gone to the synod. The report of the committee on this point is expected to-day, and this may precipitate discussion involving the whole matter under consideration. It is, however, expected that the general discussion will be postponed until later in the week.

In its last issue The Scientific American gives some interesting figures in regard to the recent record breaking trip of the New York Central engine No. 999. The engine ran a mile in 32 seconds, or at the rate of 112½ miles an hour. This speed, subjected to analysis, reveals the greatness of the achievement. In every second of its progress the engine covered a distance of 165 feet. This is the velocity which a body falling in a vacuum would acquire in a fall of 425 feet. In other words, if the engine could have had its full head of steam and could have kept it up without loss of velocity, it would have been thrown this height. With a train running at the velocity of 165 feet, it seems as if the old stories of trains jumping chasms, or running over bridges too weak to support them might be realized.

On last Sunday morning Rev. DeWitt Talmage was able to announce that the debt which had hung so heavily over his church was removed and that his remaining with the Brooklyn church is a matter of assurance. There is probably no preacher living whose sermons are read by so many people as Dr. Talmage, and the removal of the hindrances to his continued work will be generally satisfactory.

A Valuable Industry.

At a time when the Americans who mine silver are frequently denounced as public enemies, it may be worth while to direct the attention of the people to the fact that the silver product of this country, being about one-third of that of the world, is a very important contribution to the national wealth. The silver taken from American mines last year was worth nearly fifty-one million dollars. Merely as bullion, and it supplied human necessities as effectively as any other of the results of the industrial efforts of our people. Furthermore, our exports of silver were seventeen million dollars, while our imports of foreign silver were only about two million dollars. The balance of trade in favor of the country was, therefore, fifteen million dollars. The value of the silver exported was almost as great as that of the corn; it was eight millions more than that of the exports of iron and steel; it was only $200,000 less than that of the mineral oil, and also it was nearly three times as great as that of the cotton goods exported, or it was in excess of the value of the combined exports of agricultural implements, fish and cotton fabrics. Thus there can be no difficulty in discerning that any considerable suspension of silver mining in the United States would be a calamity, and it is equally clear that the legislation which forced down the value of this American product was gravely hurtful to the nation. The man who mines silver is as much entitled to consideration as the man who grows corn; but as a matter of fact, the government has no favors to confer on either, but discriminated against them.—Philadelphia Manufacturer.

Valuable Pelskins.

The skin of a silver fox, the rarest and most valuable of all furs, varies in price from $20 to $200. The whole number obtained annually amounts to only 2,000, of which about 1,000 are furnished into England. La Hontan states that in his time a skin of the silver fox was worth its weight in gold, and an unusually fine skin has been sold in the London market for $250.—Boston Globe.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES.

The Chicago Exposition and New York Weather.

[Special Correspondence.]

New York, May 18.—The most striking thing in New York this week is the weather. Monday, General Humidity was in command; Tuesday the bottom dropped out of the celestial receiver and a few million tons of water were precipitated upon the just and the unjust of the metropolis. To day it is cloudy, raw and and chilly.

Otherwise, New York is all right. After Chicago, it looks wonderfully clean and bright, although the papers here are still denouncing Street Cleaning Commissioner Brennan.

Speaking of Chicago, they can have the meanest weather there in the world, and the city is unspeakably dirty. If one could only go to the World's Fair without going to Chicago at all, it would be a pleasant arrangement. For the Fair is to be seen. No American who can possibly get there should miss it. The article in the May Harper's, by Mr. Wheeler on "Last Dream City," seems rather gushing, but after seeing the Fair, I came to the conclusion that her description was the best I had published.

The best way to approach the Exposition is by lake. In that way you get a view of the whole, and obtain a better idea of the relative size and situation of the buildings than can be had in any other way. The entrance from the pier, through the Peristyle—one of the youths who run the gospel chariots, as the wheel chairs are termed, call it the "peri-style, with the accent on the first syllable"—and then into the splendid square where stands the enormous Goddess of Liberty, facing the Administration building, with the Agricultural building on the left, and the palace of Manufactures and Liberal arts on the right. The artistic effect is wonderful; it surpasses one's wildest dreams. The buildings are all very different one from another, but there is a harmony in their lines and coloring that blends them all into one stupendous whole.

An impression has gone abroad that it costs a great deal to visit the Fair, and some people even have the idea that an admission fee is charged to every building. This is all wrong. Half a dollar admits one to everything within the grounds. To go from Chicago there, to go into the grounds and build-ings, to get a small lunch and go back [illegible] it will cost you [illegible]. If you go to the Midway Plaisance, and into all the side shows, you may spend what you like; but the Fair proper is free, after your 50 cent admission is paid.

The exhibits here are nearly ready for opening, except those in the United States Government building, but since then a great deal has been done, and unless the weather turns warm suddenly, it will be pleasanter there in June than when the heat of July begins.

To come back to New York, business here seems rather dull. The feeling of uneasiness in "the street" is by no means dispelled. Many firms are refusing all commercial paper, even that of regular customers. There is very little confidence, and everybody seems to be waiting. The Cleveland orators still have a sublime confidence in their ability, and believe that he will save the country; but other people are rather anxious. Local politics seem to be in rather bad shape on both sides. The one ray of light in the political situation here comes, strangely enough, from Jersey City, where Mayor Wanser is making war on the Democratic gang that ruled that city so long, and is getting the better of them in every battle.

It may interest many readers of The Gazette to hear that our friend Mr. Mallie is very well, and is as enthusiastic as ever about Colorado Springs in particular and the Rocky Mountain region in general. I have heard on all sides of Professor Parsons's article in the Christian Union on Colorado College. It has given the College and the city a splendid advertisement.

STATEMAKING IN THE NORTHWEST.

Proposed Changes in the Boundaries of Several Great States.

Our enterprising contemporary, the Spokane Review, calls attention to what it regards as the most feasible method of dividing the area now included in the states of Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

This method does not propose to create four states, but to create three, and to continue the existing states under a change of boundaries. The constitution declares that no new state shall be created or formed within the jurisdiction of any other state, nor any state formed by the junction of two or more states or parts of states without the consent of the legislatures of the states concerned, as well as of the congress.

Practically, the consent of the legislatures of the three states would be required for carrying out the plan proposed, and the possibility of securing such a consent is limited only by the effort to show that the interests of the people of all three states would be served by the change, and the expense of government reduced.

Briefly stated, the plan proposes that the portion of Washington south (north) west of the Cascade mountains should be continued intact a state to be called Columbia, the portion of Washington east of those mountains, together with nearly Idaho, should form another state to be called Washington, finally that south Idaho and eastern Oregon should be joined under the name of Idaho.

The argument for this change is that it would substitute natural for arbitrary boundaries and bring together areas which have analogous political interests.

All that territory lying between the Cascade mountains on the east, the Pacific ocean on the west, the Canadian boundary on the north and the Siskiyou mountains on the south is identical in character and kindred in resources. It comprises one of the great natural drainage basins of the west, and, moreover, it is served by a common transportation system. It was once embraced in the state of Oregon. It should be constituted a state.

The eastern part of Washington and the panhandle of Idaho comprise another natural subdivision of the Pacific coast. It, too, is identical in resources, climate, commercial ties and transportation facilities. It should constitute another contiguous state.

Eastern Oregon and south Idaho are also identical in topography, climate, resources and history. Already they are linked together by one great railroad system, and before many years another line, the Oregon Pacific, will traverse the latter section. Here is still another of nature's lasting and well constituted states.

Pursuing the manipulation of possible states, the territory which, by its peculiarities, is established within the limits of the proposed new state of Columbia, and that which does not fall within such limits, would then be added to the shipping on that great highway, and while state construction of portage roads would presumably be encouraged, there would be more tremendous action before congress for the improvement of the river. There would also no longer be different laws relating to the salmon fishery on the Columbia river and on the Sound.

Taxing and States would have a combined population exceeding that of Portland, the city of Oregon, so that they would be able to take care of themselves. The eastern half of Washington might hope to be relieved from the grievance of having its interests subordinated to those of the western half, as it thinks they have in the times are. Finally, the people of Spokane and vicinity in Washington would have no reason to bother their heads about the location of the capital, as they would be practically as near Olympia as they are now.

These are the arguments in favor of the plan proposed, and those immediately interested in the subject will be able to judge by reading for themselves whether or not it is worthy of consideration.—New York Sun.

TESTING THE PUBLIC.

It is difficult to explain the contradictory reports that are sent from apparently trustworthy sources in Washington regarding the policy of the new administration upon any other theory than that Mr. Cleveland and his Cabinet are anxious to get the opinion of the public in regard to certain public measures. When the variance of opinion in the Democratic camp is considered, it is not at all surprising that Mr. Cleveland himself should be unable to determine exactly what the members of his party wish, or what they will support him in endeavoring to obtain. A little while ago it was announced that Mr. Cleveland favored an income tax; now it is said that he does not. Last week it was announced that Civil Service Reform was to be extended to all possible branches of the public service, and it is announced with equal positiveness that there is still hope for the hungry and faithful ones. In fact it seems to be a general rule that the more positively a statement of government policy is made, the more certain it is to be contradicted within a few days. All these things go to show that the great Democracy has no definite notion of what it wants or of what is expected of it. And the hope of the country lies in the chance of its not agreeing sufficiently to accomplish anything.

PROFESSOR RAY'S REMOVAL.

That any trouble should have arisen in the management of the State Institute for the Deaf and Blind, located in this city, is a matter for general regret. For many years the management, both as regards the part entrusted to the Superintendent, has met with public approval, and the institution has come to be regarded as one of the best managed and most successful in the State. That a large part of the successful building up of the Institute was due to Superintendent Ray is a simple matter of historical record, and there is no room to doubt his ability and competence for the position. The news of his removal caused a general surprise, which in some instances amounted to indignation. It was, however, felt that the Board were only exercising the right of supreme control which had been delegated to them by law, and such was the confidence felt in the well known gentlemen who comprise the Board, that their actions were not publicly questioned.

Since that time there have been in circulation many rumors in regard to the matter, of a character for the most part without responsible backing, and of a nature which rendered the determination of their truth a most difficult matter. These have now culminated in definite charges preferred before the Governor of the State, and while these refer to other matters than Mr. Ray's removal, and while some of them are said to be very trivial, yet the establishment of the charges as made would afford sufficient reasons for a change in the membership of the Board.

As the matter now stands, no charges have been preferred against Mr. Ray nor has any reason been assigned for his removal other than that it was deemed to make a trial of a "more competent" man. Such a reason, while sufficient in many cases, we do not believe to be so in the present one under present circumstances. No man ever more fully realized the responsibility of his position or the importance of his work than Professor Ray, or strove more earnestly and faithfully to serve the interest of the institution with which he was connected. The rapid growth and development of the Institute from the time he entered into its management is manifest evidence of the value of his work. He was loved by the scholars under his care, he had the confidence and esteem of public men throughout the State, and is most highly respected in this community, where his reputation and standing are of the very best. The removal of such a man in favor of a stranger, however well qualified the latter may be, would suggest under ordinary circumstances injustice to the State as well as to the individual primarily affected. A word of explanation. In the present case this duty of explanation is rendered all the more advisable by the charges which have been formally preferred to the Governor and by reports widely circulated and by many believed, that the removal was due a desire for political revenge or improper personal motives.

The character, integrity and intelligence of the members of the Board would of itself preclude any credence of such statements, but charges have been so persistently circulated that in the absence of any statement from the Board, they have been prompted, as the only explanation. There is a public demand for the true facts, and the interests of the Institute as well as of the members of the Board seem to require that an explanation should be given.

As for the charges which have been made to the Governor, we trust that his action in the matter will not be hasty or partisan.

It is absolutely unfair to hold a single member responsible for the actions of the whole Board. Mr. Humphrey's public services have been long and extensive enough to entitle him to some consideration in this matter, and action should be taken only after such investigation as will secure justice to all concerned.

The opening of the Eaglesome mineral hotel at Glenwood Springs will take place on June 1. With the opening of this hotel the western resort will enter a career of prosperity which will give it a front rank among western resorts of this class. There is no reason why Colorado Springs should not share in the prosperity of its neighbor across the range. The more accommodations there are for tourists the more will come. They will not go to Glenwood to places of Manitou or vice versa, but will go to both places instead of wasting time in distant or foreign resorts. Colorado's scenery is the grandest in the world and to make it of no locality most easy, that it has an attractions. All the hotels that can be built across the range will not diminish the height of Pike's Peak by one foot or change one of the constituents of Manitou mineral water. So long as people come to Colorado they will come to Colorado Springs, Manitou and the other resorts of El Paso county, and without jealousy or envy we wish success to the new Hotel Colorado and the beautiful mountain city in which it is located.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, now in session at Washington, is in itself of sufficient importance to justify all the attention that is being given to it as a matter of news. The denomination represented is one of the most numerous and influential in the country, and its movements are an important part of current religious history. A more sensational interest is afforded to the gathering by the famous Briggs heresy trial, which will be called to take action. The appeal from the decision of the New York presbytery has been referred to the Judiciary committee, of which Rev. Geo. D. Baker is chairman. There is a question as to the regularity of the appeal, in that it has come directly to the assembly from the presbytery, without having gone to the synod. The report of the committee on this point is expected today, and this may precipitate a discussion involving the whole matter under consideration. It is, however, expected that the general discussion will be postponed until later in the week.

In its last issue The Scientific American gives some interesting figures in regard to the recent record breaking trip of the New York Central engine No. 999. The engine ran a mile in 32 seconds, or at the rate of 112½ miles an hour. This speed, subjected to analysis, reveals the greatness of the achievement. In every second of its progress the engine covered a distance of 165 feet. This is the velocity which a body falling in a vacuum would acquire in a fall of 425 feet. In other words, if the engine could have had its full loss of velocity, it would have been thrown this height. With a train running at the velocity of 165 feet, it seems as if the old stories of trains jumping chasms, or running over bridges too weak to support them might be realized.

On last Sunday morning Rev. DeWitt Talmage was able to announce that the debt which had hung so heavily over his church was removed and that his remaining with the Brooklyn church to its pastor was assured. There is probably no preacher living whose sermons are read by so many people as Dr. Talmage, and the removal of the hindrances to his continued work will be generally satisfactory.

A Valuable Industry.

At a time when the Americans who mine silver are frequently denounced as public enemies, it may be worth while to direct the attention of the people to the fact that the silver product of this country, being about one-third of that of the world, is a very important contribution to the national wealth. The silver taken from American mines last year was worth nearly fifty-one million dollars merely as bullion, and it supplied human needs quite as effectively as any other of the results of the industrial efforts of our people. Furthermore, our exports of silver were thirty million dollars of debt owed by us to other countries. The value of the silver exported was almost as great as that of the corn; it was eight millions more than that of the exports of iron and steel; it was only 2,000,000 less than that of the mineral oil, while already it was nearly three times less than that of the cotton goods exported, and it was far in excess of the value of the combined exports of agricultural implements, fish and cotton fabrics. Thus there can be no difficulty in discerning that any considerable suspension of silver mining in the United States would be a calamity, and it is equally clear that the legislation which forced down the value of this American product was gravely hurtful to the nation. The man who mines silver is as much entitled to consideration as the man who grows corn; but as a matter of fact, the government, by its demonetization of silver, has discriminated against him.—Philadelphia Manufacturer.

Valuable Forskins.

The skin of a silver fox, or, as it is often called, black fox, varies in price from $20 to $200. The whole number obtained annually amounts to only 2,000, of which amount 1,000 are imported into England. In Russian state what in this time a skin of the silver fox is worth its weight in gold, and an unusually fine skin has been sold on the London market for $250.—Boston Globe.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES.

The Chicago Exposition and New York Weather.

(Special Correspondence.)

New York, May 19.—The most striking thing in New York this week is the weather. Monday, General Humidity was in command; Tuesday the bottom dropped out of the celestial reservoir and a few million tons of water were precipitated upon the just and the unjust of the metropolis. To day it is cloudy, raw and chilly.

Otherwise, New York is all right. After Chicago, it looks wonderfully clean and bright, although the papers here are still denouncing Street Cleaning Commissioner Brennan.

Speaking of Chicago, they can have the meanest weather there in the world, and the city is unspeakably dirty. If one could only go to the World's Fair without going to Chicago at all, it would be a pleasant arrangement. For the Fair is to be seen. No American who can possibly get there should miss it. The article in the May Harper's on Chicago, by Mrs. Wheeler, on "The Dream City," seems rather gushing, but after seeing the Fair, I can't further criticism that her description was the best yet published.

The best way to approach the Exposition is by night. In that way you get a view of the whole, and obtain a better idea of the relative size and situation of the buildings than can be had in any other way. The entrance from the pier, as you enter through the peristyle, is as that of the Peristyle some of the youths who run the "gospel chariots," as the wheel chairs are termed, call it the peri-style, with the accent on the first syllable) and then into the splendid square where stands the enormous Goddess of Liberty, facing the Administration building, with the Agricultural building on the left, and the palace of Manufactures and Liberal arts on the right. The artistic effect is wonderful. It surpasses one's wildest dreams. The buildings are all very different one from another, but there is a harmony in their lines and coloring that blends them all into one stupendous whole.

An impression has gone abroad that it costs a great deal to visit the Fair, and some people even have the idea that an admission fee is charged to every building. This is all wrong. Half a dollar admits one to everything within the grounds. To go from Chicago there, to go into the grounds and buildings, to get a small lunch and go back again to Chicago, cost me just 75 cents. If you go to the Midway Plaisance, and into all the side shows, you may spend what you like, but the Fair proper is free, after your 50 cent admission is paid.

The exhibits are, comparatively speaking, not ready for the opening, except those in the United States Government building, but since then a great deal has been done, and unless the weather turns warm suddenly it will be pleasanter there in June than when the heat of July begins.

To come back to New York, business here seems rather dull. The feeling of uneasiness in "the street" is by no means dispelled. Many firms are refusing all commercial paper, even that of regular customers. There is very little confidence, and everybody seems to be waiting. The Clevelandolaters still have a sublime confidence in their idol, and believe that he will save the country, but other people are rather anxious. Local politics seem to be in rather bad shape on both sides. The one ray of light in the political situation here comes, strangely enough, from Jersey City, where Mayor Wanser is making war on the Democratic gang that ruled that city so long, and is getting the better of them in every battle.

It may interest many readers of The Gazette to hear that our friend Mr. Mabie is very well, and is as enthusiastic as ever about Colorado Springs in particular and the Rocky Mountain region in general. I have heard on all sides of Professor Parsons's article in the Christian Union on Colorado College. It has given the College and the city a splendid advertisement.

STATEMAKING IN THE NORTHWEST.

Proposed Changes in the Boundaries of Several Great States.

Our enterprising contemporary, the Spokane Review, calls attention to what it regards as the most feasible method of dividing the area now included in the states of Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

This method does not propose to create four states out of the four now within the existing states under a change of boundaries. The constitution declares that no new state shall be created or formed within the jurisdiction of any other state, nor any state formed by the junction of two or more states or parts of states without the consent of the legislatures of the states concerned, as well as of the congress.

Practically, the consent of the legislatures of the three states would be required for carrying out the plan proposed, and the possibility of securing such a consent is based on the effort to show that the interests of the people of all three states would be served by the change, and the expense of government reduced.

Briefly stated, the plan proposes that the portion of Washington and Oregon west of the Cascade mountains should be combined into a state to be called Columbia. The portion of Washington east of these mountains, together with north Idaho should form another state to be called Washington, finally that south Idaho and eastern Oregon should be joined under the name of Idaho.

The argument for this change is that it would substitute natural for arbitrary boundaries and bring together areas which have analogous or identical interests.

"All that territory lying between the Cascade mountains on the east, the Pacific ocean on the west, the Canadian boundary on the north and the Siskiyou mountains on the south is identical in character and kindred in resources. It comprises one of the great natural drainage basins of the west and, moreover, it is served by a common transportation system. It was once embraced in the state of Oregon. It should be one state today, instead of parts of two states.

"The eastern part of Washington and the panhandle of Idaho comprise another natural subdivision of the Pacific coast. It, too, is identical in resources, climate, commercial ties and transportation facilities. It should constitute another sovereign state.

"Eastern Oregon and south Idaho are also identical in resources, climate, products and history. Already they are linked together by one great railroad system, and before many years another line, the Oregon Pacific, will traverse their broad areas. Here is still another of nature's lasting and this should constitute a state."

Pursuing the recapitulation of possibilities the Spokane Review adds: "Established within the limits of the proposed new state of Washington would then be established uniform jurisdiction would then be established over both shores of the Columbia river. This would be for the advantage of the shipping on that great highway and while state construction of portage roads would presumably be unpurposed here, might be more tremendous action in securing for the improvement of the river. There would also no longer be different laws relating to the salmon fishery on one side of the stream and on the other.

"Tacoma and Seattle would have a combined population exceeding that of Portland, the chief city of Oregon, so that they would be able to take care of themselves. The eastern half of Washington might hope to get a fair share of the capital and other interests subordinated to those of the western part, as it unless the times are. Finally, the people of north Idaho and eastern Washington would have easier access to their chief commercial city.

"These considerations in respect to the changes in the boundaries of the states mentioned are merely suggestive. But there are many other considerations which would be favorable to the change. The new states would be more compact and symmetrical, and so that it may have a population and resources suitable to a state of the Union and not unnecessarily large. New York Sun

Catarrh

My daughter was afflicted for nearly a year with catarrh. The physicians in attendance pronounced her incurable. She finally gave up hope and refused to take any more medicine. I then induced her to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. She had taken but two bottles when she began to improve. Three months of this treatment with Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Pills completely restored her to health. Mrs. Louise Rowe, Little Church, Ware, Mass.

Rheumatism

For four years I was troubled with rheumatism in the shoulder joint. I tried many remedies, but found no relief until I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The first bottle gave me great relief, and before I had taken a second bottle I was entirely cured. T. Hansbrough, Lib. Bun, Va.

Dr. F. A. Hale, who was seriously ill on Sunday was reported better yesterday.

Mr. A. H. Martin of Denver was in the city yesterday on route to Cripple Creek.

Mr. F. W. Stroud returned yesterday from a prospecting trip to Glenwood Springs.

Judge W. McReese, a well known real estate and mining man of Denver, is in the city a guest of Mr. J. H. Fitzpatrick.

Mr. Samuel Wilder, who has been ill at The Antlers for some time, left Sunday evening for his home in Boston, N. Y.

Justice Shadeler yesterday afternoon united in marriage George R. Gandy and Miss Mary Watson, both of Monument, Colo.

Mr. Judson Bent returned home yesterday after a month's visit in the east. He spent some time at the big Fair and returns enthusiastic over it.

It is feared that the cold nights for the past few days have killed off all the tree fruits. The currants and berries are probably, however, all right.

John Wilson, a native of Ireland, took out naturalization papers in the County Court yesterday, renouncing allegiance to Alexander, czar of all the Russias.

Rev. Joseph Sagebeer, of Ulm, Neb., delegate to the Baptist convention in Denver, is spending a few days in the city. He is registered at the New Alamo.

The city was filled Sunday with Baptist ministers and other delegates to the great Baptist convention in Denver this week. Quite a large party were guests at The Antlers.

Mr. D. W. Goodman, genial proprietor of The Standard, a leading Baptist publication was in the city yesterday from Chicago en route to the Denver convention.

Mr. James A. Barnes, a wealthy resident of New Bedford, Mass., arrived in town yesterday and was the guest at the El Paso club of Mr. F. H. Pettis. Mr. Barnes will visit Cripple Creek before returning home.

The recalcitrant members of the "chain gang" who demanded three meals a day instead of two have succumbed. For two weeks they have held out on one meal per day and "hoss" bread and water, but became repentant last night.

Rev. Fr. Francolon, of Manitou is about to leave for a missionary trip among the Indians of New Mexico. He will act as interpreter to the newly appointed Governor Thompson, who desires to inspect the reservation.

A negro porter connected with the Clarendon hotel at Cripple Creek took a shot at a woman in a negro dance hall Saturday night. The bullet missed the woman but inflicted a flesh wound in the leg of a white man standing in the crowd.

Late Sunday night Captain Gathright and Officer Harlan arrested half a dozen negroes for gambling in Joe Moore's hard hall on Huerfano street. In the police court yesterday Moore was fined $50 and costs and five others got $15 and costs each. They will pay the fines.

A party of excursionists from Boston numbering thirty-four people and nearly all young ladies, are registered at the Alamo. They are en route to Glenwood in charge of Asa. Hunt of the Raymond & Whitcomb company. They came in the Santa Fe last night and will go west this morning.

The following are among the latest rivals at The Antlers: Sir Edis, and Lady Green and Mr. Wardo Green from England; S. W. Phillips and A. H. Anderson, New Zealand; Alex. Schneider Frankfort-on-the-Main; J. W. Kerr and Miss E. M. and Evelyn Kerr, Melbourne; and H. Copien and T. Delices, Germany.

Mr. E. C. G. Robinson has drawn plans for the new hotel to be erected this summer on the top of Pike's Peak. It will be a 22-room building, located at the north end of the signal station. It will be heated by both stoves and hot water. Eighteen of the rooms will be utilized as sleeping apartments. The structure will be twenty-two feet high, and will be built entirely of stone. The estimated cost is placed at between $9,000 and $10,000, which is exclusive of furnishings.

City Engineer Penso of Manitou has made a report to the town council that the Balanced Rock is wholly within the corporate limits of Manitou, but that it stands in the public highway or county road. He also reported that the base upon which the rock rests is slowly but surely crumbling away, and recommended that steps be taken to protect it if the city cares to preserve it as a Manitou attraction. He also recommended that the city council petition the county commissioners to make a new survey through the Garden of the Gods.

Translating Latin.

In a recent justice case, a gentleman being put on the stand to testify as to certain powers of receivers, commenced using an authority to the court cause across the words and genders, which he claimed that the officer so described had a right to use generally. The judge accepted the translation as perfectly correct until a smile among the lawyers present caused a doubt in his mind.—Green Bag.

An Accommodating Teacher.

Nellie's sister, who kept house for the Berlin professor, took fresh arguments against the new study, no one thought the professor would be complimented if the matter came to a vote, and it returned to the old ledge, and to the university.—Chicago Journal.

A PROPOSED RAILROAD.

The proposed new railroad from Denver into Middle Park and on down the White or Yampah valleys, and so to Salt Lake or San Francisco would be a good thing for Denver, but there is no reason why it should meet with an enthusiastic approval from the rest of the State. So far as through travel is concerned Colorado has already as many direct lines as public necessity demands, and the building of a new one would not be to provide for the necessities of trade, but to unnecessarily multiply competition and diminish the earning capacity of those already built. The Rio Grande has on its main line two expensive tunnels, one at Tennessee Pass and the other in Cottonwood canon, just this side of Glenwood, and the Midland is just completing a great [illegible] through the Continental divide. These gateways will be ample for all transcontinental traffic for many years to come, and the construction of another great tunnel through the mountains directly west of Denver will only serve to advance the interests of selfish merchants who are determined that no dollar of trade that can be brought to Denver shall be permitted to contribute to the prosperity of any other city in the State.

For many miles to the west of Denver the country is not such as to afford any considerable amount of local traffic. Even the much-talked-of Middle Park is a mountain walled region which is too high for profitable agriculture, and which will always remain sparsely settled. As for the White and Yampah river valleys no one can doubt their fertility and natural resources. They are second to none among the richest parts of the State. But they are naturally tributary to the cities which are being built up in the western part of the State, and not to greedy Denver. They can be far more cheaply and conveniently reached by branch lines of the Rio Grande or the Midland, passing for their entire distance through rich valleys, than by an expensive and long line down and through the mountains from Denver. It is certain that as soon as the [illegible] the investment, these branch lines, so long projected, will be built, and in the meantime the investment of money in such a scheme as that now proposed is almost certain to end in financial ruin to all concerned.

If Denver capitalists wish to spend their money to the injury of Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Leadville, Glenwood and Grand Junction, they have a perfect right to do so, but they should not expect the sympathy of the rest of the State in so doing, and they should not present it to strangers as a money making opportunity, or anything else than exactly what it is.

THE PRESS CONGRESS.

The second of the great World's Congresses, to be held in connection with the Columbian Exposition, is now in session at Chicago. The place of the women who met in the Columbus and Washington Halls and the minor assembly rooms last week is now taken by newspaper men and women from all countries of the earth where the printing press is in use. The programme includes almost every department of newspaper work, and distinguished representatives of American and European newspapers will give public addresses. The object of the Press Congress as expressed by the official bulletin is "to provide for a proper presentation of the work and influence of the public press, in appropriate congresses in connection with the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893; to bring the most active and potent agencies of public opinion into more harmonious and useful relations, and as far as may be practicable to enable the attending people to see and hear the attending masters of journalism."

Among the subjects proposed for consideration at the Congress are the following: The relations of the public press to modern civilization; the origin, nature and development of the modern newspaper; the relation of the public press to current events; the distinguishing characteristics of the public press of different countries; the [illegible] errors and mistakes, and the reparation of injuries inflicted on innocent persons; the public press as the advocate of human rights and the champion of the interests of the common people; the liberty of the press from the standpoint of law and progress, and its bearings on civilization; the publication of a newspaper a public trust, and as such its rights, duties and responsibilities; the press as an agency of commerce and a factor in the production and exchange of commodities; the relation of the press to political life and power; the distinctive ethics of journalism; the relations of the press to education and to moral and economic reforms; the art of news-gathering and the office of editorial comment, independently and in their relations to each other; the essential departments of the daily and weekly press, and the proper field for the magazine; the press in its relations to international affairs and the great interests common to humanity; the public press and the value of organization in its operations; the public press and the improvements in the structures occupied by it; the public press and the improvements in machinery and appliances used in connection therewith; the public press and the improvements in the business methods in connection therewith.

The religious and weekly press have not been overlooked, and their features and possibilities will form the subjects of numerous essays. Leading representatives of modern journalism will discuss the broader aspects of the subject, and distinguished foreigners will present the matter as it appears to them. Among the latter will be M. de Blowitz of Paris, the famous political correspondent; James Bryce, delegate from Great Britain; Marquis de Chasseloup-Laubat, delegate from France; Dr. Stephen Wantzaff, delegate from Germany; [illegible] Grandduke Alexander from Russia; Dr. Adolfo Bu[illegible], delegate from Venezuela; Dr. Carlos R. Gallardo, delegate from Argentine Republic; Captain Ad. P. Pinheiro, delegate from Brazil; and Professor Dimschin, delegate from Russia.

An interesting experiment is to be tried in the appointment of army officers to act as Indian agents. Upon the request of Secretary Smith of the Interior department, the Secretary of War has furnished a list of officers available for this service, and it is announced that the policy of the government will be to place an army officer in charge of all the agencies, except where the Indians have reached an advanced stage of civilization. There is a great deal that might be said both for and against the proposed change. Perhaps the most serious objection to the old system is that the Interior department has not at its disposal a force sufficient to enforce obedience to its regulations. In case of trouble it is necessary to call on another department of the government and this division of authority gives rise to complications and tends to lessen the respect of the Indians for their agents. The new experiment appears to be one worth trying, and the results will be awaited with considerable interest by all who are concerned with the vexed question of Indian management.

The Forestry Division of the Agricultural department has issued a new circular calling attention of lumbermen, miners and others to the necessity of avoiding waste in cutting timber, and to the advisability of precautions against forest fires. The circular also embodies a draft of a proposed law for forest preservation and management. While it is probable that no plan would meet the approval even of all advocates of forest management as opposed to forest waste, yet there is such great and pressing need of some law on the subject that it is better to get some system into operation even if it is not altogether what might be desired rather than to let matters run along as they are now doing. Changes and improvements can easily be made at a later date and they can be made all the better for the experience that will then have been acquired.

ART OF MAKING A SHOW.

American and Foreign Methods at the World's Fair.

World's Fair, May 22.—[Special.]—In going through the exposition one finds himself more interested at first in noting how the various exhibits are installed than he is in the exhibits themselves. People who attended the Paris show four years ago say the installation here is superior in the matter to that witnessed in the French capital. It has long been a tradition that American manufacturers and merchants do not know how to install exhibits in a great exposition. This may have been true years ago, but every one who has kept his eyes open must have noticed the wonderful progress that has been made in this country in the attractive arrangement of show windows. Even in the smaller cities and towns you will see shop windows in which both taste and originality have been expended upon the displays. In the larger cities there are professional show-window experts who, through the process of the keen competition, have brought the general standard very much higher than it ever was before. The foreign shops cannot vie with ours in the beauty or interest of their street shows.

Well, this exposition is simply an international show window on a tremendous scale. It is a series of "fronts" in which all the world has displayed its best in the most attractive manner possible; and it may be said in truth that Americans do not suffer in the comparison. It is in the main building that the displays are most pretentious than anywhere else. Here the most money has been expended in pavilions and ornamentation. At first glance the visitor is disappointed in the American part of the show. As he approaches the center of the monster enclosure—where the clock tower is—he finds three lines of grandeur and beauty, and one which starts out impossibly but soon dwindles into comparative insignificance. The three beautiful lines are those aisles or avenues which are flanked by the foreign exhibits, while the last is the right side of the north avenue, where the American exhibitors are.

Before passing judgment one must stop to consider that the immense pavilions which adorn the foreign sections were erected by the governments of the exhibiting countries. Each of the countries has taken the space allotted to it, erected a costly facade and extensive structure, and then subdivided the space among firms or institutions which in turn have added their contributions to the general effect. Thus the German government has spent probably a quarter of a million of dollars in the construction of their noble pavilion. It is very rich and imposing, and is of itself an exposition building of great size and rare beauty. The French government has expended, on the opposite corner of the central space, almost as large a sum. They have not only spent a great deal of money but have taken much time to the development of their plans, so that as I write the workmen are still thick upon the vast structure and not more than half the exhibits are in place. Other governments, England excepted, have worked on a similar basis, and of course they all make a magnificent showing.

In a United States section of the building the government has done nothing. The federal money and energy have been expended in the government building just to the north, which is one of the most fascinating displays to be seen with[illegible] and other outdoor exhibits. Within the main building America is represented altogether by firms and corporations. Therefore we find facing the costly pavilions of the French, the Germans, the Austrians and the Japanese such structures as individual enterprise and liberality could afford to erect. It follows as a matter of course that the foreign sections are much more imposing and magnificent. One would not expect American firms to compete with foreign governments which have had hundreds of thousands of dollars at command, with private effort to support them.

So far as the frontage of the four sections of the east hall is concerned the American section shows up very well, notwithstanding. Three or four firms, holding the post of honor in the American quarter, have erected pavilions which compare well with those of the foreign governments near by. In the opinion of many visitors the most beautiful pavilion in the palace is that which stands as a sort of center piece to the United States section. Though it cost probably no more than one-fifth as much money as the rivals across the way, it is more symmetrical than the German structure, and more pleasing in color and form than the French. In perfection of coloring and decoration, both outside and in, it is by all odds the most notable thing here. Its ceiling and walls are already attracting thousands of visitors daily, and many of them are foreigners who readily yield the palm to Americans in interior decoration.

Comparing the [illegible] adopted by the Americans and English, neither of whom have been invited here by governments, the writers are far ahead. The English section is much like a series of Regent shops. In buildings rather plain and unpretentious, its show cases quietly rich but not remarkable, may be found some of the most glorious products of the handiwork of man. The English is characteristic of them. They depend solely upon the merits of their wares. They make no attempt at spectacularism in panels or show windows, and do not appear to possess any art in the arrangement of the articles which they have to show.

There are many striking contrasts here. The dissimilarity between the methods employed by the English and that chief Europe an nation [illegible] The American [illegible] In the United States section you will quickly perceive that the Yankee is here, that American originality and cuteness have had full sway. That artful arrangement of wares into novel forms catch the eye at every turn, and that many of the pavilions are of a sensational character.

FIG. AS A COUNTRY SCHOOL HOUSE.

While the English lumber is tediously simple and almost plain, and the Continental foreigner endeavors to mix architectural effects, statuary and hangings with his wares—to show the products of his factories in miniature palaces—the American sticks much closer to the thing which he has to show. It is that and not some allied art that he seeks to glorify. The average American does not pretend to a knowledge of archæology, or of statuary, or of paintings, or of tapestries; and he declines to admit that his wares need any such embellishment to make them attractive. On the other hand, he replaces the simplicity of his British cousins by deft manipulation of his goods, so that even the most commonplace of exhibits are made sensational. Some of these efforts are surprising.

For instance, you would not think there was anything attractive about a cook stove, would you? It is, though one of the most useful of mans fabrications, one of the most commonplace. But the case wears a different aspect when the exhibitor—apparently saying to himself, "the stove's the thing and the stove it shall be,"—makes a stove of perfect detail and proportions as big as a country school house, puts electric lights in it to illuminate the letters which denote its name, and asks visitors to step within the stove which is in itself a pavilion and see what he has to show them. This is sensationalism, it is true, and it savors of advertising methods, but it is distinctively American. Besides, what is the exposition, anyway, but an advertising show-window of the nations?

Another American manufacturer builds an immense trunk, just like any overgrown trunk, except that its walls are of glass. This is his pavilion, and within it he displays his [illegible] for fashionable [illegible] It [illegible] a couple of corsets. Made by George Frost Co., Boston. For Scrofula

After suffering for about twenty-five years from scrofulous sores on the legs and ankles, trying various medical remedies without benefit, I began to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and a wonderful cure was the result. The sores soon began to heal, and have now entirely disappeared. I commend Ayer's Sarsaparilla to my friends as the best blood purifier in the world.—Reuben Rodgers, 25 E. Commerce st., San Antonio, Texas.

Catarrh

My daughter was afflicted for nearly a year with catarrh. The [illegible] me unable to help her. [illegible] Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles of this medicine entirely cured her. I heartily recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla to those afflicted as she was.—Mrs. Louise Hartley, Little Canada, West Mass.

Rheumatism

For several years I was troubled with rheumatic pains in my legs, so bad at times as to confine me to the house. For the last two years when I felt the effects of the disease I would take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and have had a speedy relief.—J. J. Bassett, Smith Fall, Va.

WITHIN THE REACH

of every woman is health and strength. They're taught to you by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Take this medicine, and there's a safe, a certain cure for all the ichorous weaknesses, derangements, and drains peculiar to the sex. It gives vigor and strength, and invigorates every "run-down" or delicate woman. It regulates and assists all the natural functions—it confers with them, and helps nicely to the key in the cold turn of the female system.

At some period in her life, a woman ought to consult, as well as interest, herself—and nothing.

If you're a doctor—you can find no other woman—you can find no other remedy that's guaranteed. If the prescription" offer fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

So small is the chance of failure, with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, that the proprietors are willing to make this proposition. If we can't cure your Catarrh, no matter how bad your case is, we'll pay you $500 in cash.

A special meeting of Pho nix encampment will be held this evening in Odd Fellows hall for the purpose of exemplifying the Royal Purple degree.

Mr. J. H. Jewett has disposed of his entire business interests in Buffalo, N. Y., and will make Green Mountain Falls his permanent home. He will at once erect six new cottages at the resort.

In some cases the best is as cheap as the poorest. The rich milk and cream of the Garden Dairy is offered at the same price as the product of the other dairies. Office Bank Block. Telephone No. 255.

Mr. J. F. Schlotzhauer has rented a cottage at Green Mountain Falls for the season. Engagement is announced of Miss Jessie Dickson McKee, the grandson of the ex-president. He gave the little fellow a lamb two years ago that became a great pet around the White House.

All Nobles of the Mystic Shrine are requested to meet at the Masonic temple at 3:30 p. m., May 25, in full dress, with fez, for the purpose of proceeding to the depot to receive the officers and Nobles of El Jebel Temple, who will arrive from Denver on a special train at 4:30 p. m.

In the District Court yesterday the case of the People vs. Stevens was heard, and the prisoner was discharged under instruction of the Court, owing to a failure in the proper identification of the property. The case was the robbery of jewelry at the house of H. K. Devereux last winter. The cases against Motton, indicted for receiving the stolen property, were dismissed. Henry Williams, charged with petit larceny, was sentenced to five days in jail.

The High School Cadet Glee club and the Young Ladies' Glee club of the schools have arranged for a concert in the auditorium on the evening of June 9. It is to be the farewell concert and will surpass any previous effort in this line. The Young Ladies' Glee club will make its first public appearance on this occasion. It is composed of about thirty young ladies selected from all the schools and is preparing under the leadership of Professor Bach.
